Returning to Work

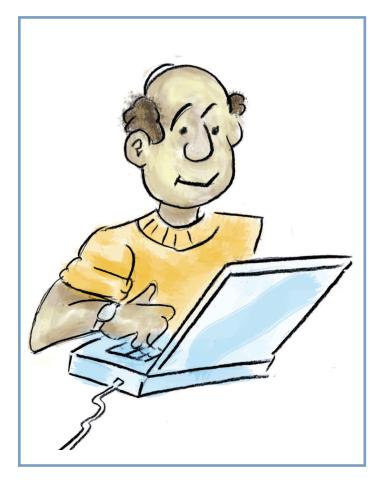

Returning to work, going to school or starting a new career is an option for many dialysis patients.

- Talk to your doctor to see if there are any specific restrictions for you
- Openly discuss your kidney disease with your employer or school and answer questions about your ability to handle the work load
- Tell your dialysis care team you are returning to work or school

Returning to Work

- If you want to train for another job, talk to the Social Worker. He or she can help you contact the right public or private agencies.
- Call the Division of Vocational Rehabilitation for training information
- If you are interviewing for a new job, tell them what you do best
- Discuss with your doctor and healthcare team how your dialysis treatments can be made to fit with your job and lifestyle
